LUPANG HINIRANG

*Bayang Magiliw,
Perlas ng silanganan.
Alab ng puso,
Sa dibatib mo'y buhay.*

*Lupang hinirang,
Duyan ka ng magiting.
Sa manulupig,
'di ka passisil.*

*Sa dagat at bundok,
Sa simoy at sa langit mong bughaw,
May dilag and tula at awit sa
paglayang minamahal.*

*Ang kislap ng watawat mo'y tagumpay ng nagtiningning.
Ang bituin at araw niya kailan
pa ma'y di magdidilim*

*Lupa ng araw ng luwalhati't pagsinta,
Buhay ay langit sa piling mo.
Aming ligaya na pag may mang-aapi
Ang mamatay ng dahil sa iyo.*

MESSAGE FROM THE AMBASSADOR

Until the mid-sixties, Philippine Independence Day used to be observed and celebrated on July 4th. But Proclamation No. 28 passed by Congress and approved by then Pres. Diosdado Macapagal in 1964 moved the observance of Philippine Independence Day from July 4th to June 12th.

This change shows that the meanings people read in events change according to their perceptions and their experiences. At the same time, however, a people's independence is not something permanent - once attained it stays. No. It is a process that is continually being defined and realized by a people. It has to be nurtured, kept alive and protected by the people. Viewed from this perspective, the declaration of independence in Kawit, Cavite by the revolutionary government in 1896 and the grant of independence which marked the end of the American Commonwealth era in the Philippines in 1946 were but starting points in our journey towards the attainment of a sovereign republic.

Today our country faces new challenges which need to be addressed and new opportunities which if properly harnessed can lead us to progress and prosperity. I think it is important to emphasize the twin relationship between challenge and opportunity. It is only by going through difficult and trying situations that we are able to exercise our capabilities, our talents, our creativity and our character.

Filipinos who have been fortunate to travel, live and work abroad, like the members of the Filipino Association in Denmark, have had the opportunity directly to observe and experience social, economic, political and governmental systems that are more effective and efficient than those presently found in developing countries. However, it should be borne in mind that these systems were built over a long period of time and at great costs and sacrifice by the peoples of these countries.

On this day, I think it would be appropriate for us to reflect on the meaning of our country's independence at this particular period of our history and at the same time try to relate our personal lives to that independence. If this much we are able to accomplish today, this annual ritual would really have served its purpose.

MESSAGE FROM THE CONSUL

On the occasion of 91st anniversary of the Philippine Republic I want to convey my warmest greetings to all members of the Filipino Association of Denmark.

After a little more than six months in office I also want to express my appreciation of the welcoming attitude and interest which I am met with from Philippine quarters.

In the coming years I believe the continued cooperation between the FAD and the Consulate can disseminate the knowledge of the Philippine distinctive character in order to promote the Filipinos and the Republic of the Philippines. At the same time we can create better conditions for the new-comers and the people still to come who are to be integrated into a Danish life, hopefully, maintaining their Philippine peculiarity.

It is my sincere hope that the Philippines will continue its way towards progress and that stability and peace will be the prevailing factors of the future.

Let us together convey our best wishes for the country of the thousands of beautiful islands and make mutual efforts to succeed in our duties on its behalf to the best of the Philippines and the Filipino Community in Denmark.

Mabuhay!

MESSAGE FROM THE SPIRITUAL ADVISER

Dear Danes, have you ever been to a barrio fiesta in the Philippines? If not, ask your Filipino friends about it. See how they glow with delight as they talk about the children, the young, the old, the shopkeepers, the farmers, the dalagas, the children who all join for the Fiesta Mass and Procession. They know what they are about. It is their great annual day to celebrate their Patron Saint. They do this, not only with lovely hymns and prayers, sounds of bands, guitar music and much fireworks. There is a buzz of excitement everywhere. Guests are made welcome. It is OPEN HOUSE for everyone. It is a great celebration of Faith.

Dear Pinoys, only you truly know how to celebrate. Today, you have have invited us to celebrate your National Independence Day, a feat of Freedom and Faith. Today we join with you to pray for Filipinos all over the world and especially those back home. There are still many hardship to endure in your homeland, even after "People Power" brought a sense of democracy and hope for a brighter future.

May that promise of a better social and economic life soon be felt in the Philippine.

May we continue to benefit from the Faith, Devotion, and Warmth which the Filipinos bring with them throughout the world, and especially to us here in Denmark.

MABUHAY, and may the Grace of our Lord His LOVE and PEACE be with you ALWAYS.

MESSAGE FROM THE FAD PRESIDENT

Each year, the Filipino community here in Denmark celebrates Freedom Day to pay tribute to the bravery and patriotism of our forefathers who freed the country from centuries of colonial slavery and oppression. On every occasion like this, we are confronted with the question: What have we done so far to harness our independence since then? Is the Filipino truly free and independent?

We would rather evade to answer the question because of fear of getting unfavourable and sometimes downright answers. Like our fellow Pinoys back home who profess to be independent, we are not exactly free. Although we have the opportunity to be living in a well-developed country, we still have to free ourselves from the clutches spawned by our own apathy, unemployment, crime, pollution, prejudice and racism, vanity and unaffordable extravagance, and irrelevant values. We are responsible to help our countrymen, whenever we go home for the holidays, to free themselves from the shackles of too much Western orientation and highly colonial mentality.

This occasion should be a day of reawakening for us to examine ourselves and the things we have taken for granted. It is only after we shall have freed ourselves could we enjoy the blessings of a genuine independence.

Mabuhay ang bagong Pinoy!

BAYAN KO / PAGKAKAISA

(Filipino Internationale)

Solo: Ang bayan kong Pilipinas
Lupain ng ginto't bulaklak
Pag-ibig ng sa kanyang palad
Nag-alay ng ganda't dilag
At sa kanyang yumi at ganda
Dayuhan ay nahalina
Bayan ko, binihag ka
Nasadlak sa dusa

All : Ibon man may layang lumipad
Kulungin mo at umiiyak
Bayan pa kayang sakdal dilag
Ang di magnasang maka-alpas
Pilipinas kong minumutya
pugad ng luha ko't dalita
Aking adhika
Makitang kang sakdal laya

Solo: Kung magkakasama-sama lang
Ang taong bayan ay matutupad
Ang bayan natin ay lalaya
At ang katarungan malalasar

Ang kasamaan ay di naghahari
Kung ayaw nating tatanggapin
Tayo nang makakaisa
Labanan natin ang naghaharing dilim.

All : Ibon.....

AVE MARIA

(Santacruzán Song)

Dios te salve, Maria
Llena eres te gracia
El Señor es contigo
Bendita tu eres
Entre todas las mujeres
Y bendito es el fruto
Y bendito es el fruto
De tu vientre, Jesús

Santa Maria, Madre de Dios
Ruega por nosotros, pecadores
Ahora en la hora
De nuestra muerte. Amen

Santacruzán Pageantry and Pomp

SANTACRUZAN (The Holy Cross) is the most charming of the Maytime festivities among the Christian Filipinos. It is usually lavish, with the soft hue from the flowers and young ladies in bloom, clearly representing the freshness and merriment of the month of May.

The celebration recalls the quest of St. Helena and her son Constantine of Ancient Byzantine for the true and holy cross of Christ. The legend says that St. Helena journeyed to Calvary 300 years after the death of Christ and found the holy Cross, which became instrumental in the conversion of her son into Christianity.

The nine-day evening floral procession cum parade, includes its main cast, Reyna Elena (St. Helena) who is chosen among the most beautiful ladies in the town or village and her youthful escort Constantino (Constantine). The succeeding entourage of princesses and princes-in-waiting playing biblical characters, are dressed in fiesta finery. Under flower-decked and lighted arches held by assistants, the ladies and their escorts are royalty for a while, walking through the town thoroughfares like king and queen. Members of the community hold lighted candles and joyously singing Marian songs, alternately praying the rosary.

No fiesta can match the pomp, extravagance and pageantry of the SANTACRUZAN.

To celebrate the 91st Philippine Independence Day, The Filipino Association of Denmark proudly presents this unique quasi-religious culture. Nine ladies and their sponsors cooperated to hold a SANTACRUZAN as a tribute to the Filipino people on Freedom Day.

JOSE RIZAL IN

By FILOMENITA MONGAYA-HWGS HOLM

It is a source of enduring fascination for this first-time visitor to Czechoslovakia to see that Czechoslovaks have always felt honored to have hosted a visit of our national hero, Dr. Jose Rizal, a century ago. The friendship between the Prague-born Ferdinand Blumentritt and the Filipino reformist began in the Bohemian town of Litomerice (also Leitmeritz). That this seems to be a cherished memory in this faraway country is something that will surprise the Filipino visitor to this republic, whose tricolored flag is very similar to that of our nation, except for the sun and the stars with which we have embellished ours.

In 1974, the towns of Calamba, Laguna, where Rizal was born, and Litomerice, where Blumentritt lived and died, were united as twin or sister towns in order to underline the unique connection between these two communities.

On May 20, 1987, the people of Litomerice hosted the centennial commemoration of the visit of the Filipino hero to their historic town. The evening activity centered on a series of lectures by contemporary historians and academics that focused on the friendship between Rizal and Blumentritt, and the resultant revolutionary fervor engendered in the two.

The foremost historian in Czechoslovakia today, Prof. Dr. Josef Polišenský, was the first who spoke. Although his original interest was Latin American history, in particular Spanish domination of that continent, this led him to the figure of Ferdinand Blumentritt, who wrote on the geographical, economic and social conditions of Spain's colony in the Pacific. His historical research consequently led Polišenský to the Filipino reformist, with whom Blumentritt collaborated on the issue of reforms for the colony based on the eradication of feudal-feudocratic rule.

Polišenský pointed out that it was to his friend Blumentritt that Rizal dedicated his "Last Farewell" written on the eve of his execution on December 30, 1896. This Bolsters the impression that the friendship between the two indeed went beyond the ordinary. In Blumentritt's case, although he never traveled to the Philippines, his deep engagement in the causes that Rizal espoused made him a world authority on things pertaining to the Philippines.

According to Prof. Polišenský, a number of Blumentritt's works remain in Czechoslovakia. The greater part was sold by Blumentritt's heirs to the Philippine government, and has formed part of the collection of our National Library, since 1937.

The town archivist of Litomerice, Dr. Jindřich Tomas, who has published a number of articles on the town and its more famous sons, and is widely considered as an authority on Blumentritt's life, also presented a paper. It must be remembered that although he was published internationally, Blumentritt spent practically his whole life as a teacher in the Litomerice gymnasium (equivalent to our pre-college level, but slightly higher than the high school). Dr. Tomas also spoke on the impact of the three days the two personages spent together.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

So intense, in fact, was their friendship that it led to profound changes. Blumentritt himself ended up as a revolutionary, who espoused after Rizal's death the cause of anti racialism while denouncing the continuing colonial burden of the post-hispanic Philippines under the expansionistic Americans.

In contrast to most people, Blumentritt, according to Dr. Tomas, became more radical as he grew older after his fateful meeting with Rizal that May a hundred years ago. Finally, a slide presentation on the present day Philippines was given by Dr. Eva Horakova, a social scientist who has conducted studies on the Philippines. She has taken a sabbatical from academe, and is a practicing journalist with Czechoslovakian News Agency, CTK. Her well-chosen array of illustrations gave a very informed and accurate picture of Philippine society.

The venue for commemoration was the town library named after a Czech poet and pioneer revolutionary romanticist, Karel Hynek Macha. The building is located in the enormous town square. Just a few doors away is the hotel where Rizal was said to have lost his diamond tie tack, only to find that it was already waiting for him at his next destination. It has been found by the hotel management and sent express! On the opposite side of the square is located the town hall which bears a plaque commemorating Rizal's visit in 1887.

In attendance was a representative sampling of the people of the town: young, middle aged and somewhat older people. Also in attendance, aside from the town's dignitaries, were Foreign Ministry officials as Antonin Simecek, deputy secretary general of the Czechoslovak Society for International Relations, as well as Dr. Frantisek Vychodil, research fellow at the Institute of International Relations. They both called for more active initiatives in keeping the Rizal-Blumentritt connection alive, especially in Litomerice.

To judge from the popping of numerous flashbulbs, the presence of a freelancing Filipino journalist was very welcome, as if to make up for the previous week's letdown. Philippine Ambassador to Bonn, Augusto Cesar Espiritu, who has a book on Rizal in the offing, came the week before the centenary. His visit however had to be unofficial because he is accredited to West Germany and not to some "neutral" country like Austria or Switzerland.

Other Filipinos who have come as pilgrims to this part of Czechoslovakia have been Gemma Cruz Araneta and husband Tonyet. The late Carlos P. Romulo was given the singular honor of receiving a key to the city.

After the commemorative program, one could not help wondering what we Filipinos are doing about our own heroes, our own heritage. How can a country so remote from the Philippines, not only geographically but also politically, identify with its revolutionary struggles? Could it be that if we looked closer into our histories, we might find that our two nations might share experiences and aspirations in our colonial past that ought to bind us closer together?

FILIPINO NOVELIST in DENMARK FOR LAUNCH

by Filomenita Mongaya Høgsholm

Copenhagen in May 1989.

The Philippines' leading novelist, short story writer and publisher Francisco Sionil Jose, arrived in mid-May to the Danish capital for the launch of the Danish version of MASS, the fifth in his Rosales novels, and dealing with student ferment prior to the Marcos seizure of legal power in the Philippines in the early 70'.

MASS which is now dubbed DAGGRY (meaning dawn) in Danish, is the first major Filipino literary work to be published in Denmark. It is the publishing house HJULET (the Wheel), which has third world literature as its specialty which is releasing the Danish translation of Mr. Jose's most internationally known work. MASS because of its subversive theme, at least as the Marcos regime was concerned, was originally published in Dutch. The original version (in English) was published later in Manila in 1984. It has since been published in Bahasa Indonesia and Swedish and now, also in Danish.

Mr. Vagn Plenge, the publisher has made the arrangements for Mr. Jose's sojourn in Denmark, which also includes lectures on Philippine history, culture and language in the university circuit at Copenhagen as well as in Aarhus. Mr. Jose hopes to return to the Philippines again after a whole month of promoting his first ever Danish book in the country. Mr. Jose will attend a conference in Berlin before flying back to Manila in mid-June.

FROM NORTHERN JUTLAND TO NORTHERN LUZON

A Danish couple, Bente and Peter Jensen from Vadum, Aalborg launched a scholarship program for youths in Penablanca, an obscure town in Cagayan Province. The idea was conceived after their DANIDA sponsored trip to the town in 1987. The scholarship program aims to give hope to the poverty stricken families who make a living in planting rice and corn, by sponsoring their deserving children to go to high school. Currently, the program has 23 grantees and seven others under the couple's own sponsorship.

Every sponsor in Vadum spends around 1000 kr. a year to pay the annual cost of the students according to a proposed budget. Every grantee gets his/her matriculation fees, medical and dental fees, uniform, allowances paid for. He/she also gets 10 USD at birth-days and Christmas. Aside from maintaining a good scholastic standing, the student is required to keep a regular written communication with the sponsor.

A group of trustee picked from the local residents of Penablaja administers the program and checks and reports the progress of the students.

The couple is also working on the erection of a dormitory through the help of DANIDA with a medical and dental rooms.

TWO BOOKS ABOUT THE PHILIPPINES WRITTEN BY DANES

The tumultuous event of 1986 became the staple of international media and the favorite subject of publishers from both sides of the Atlantic. "Waltzing Witth A Dictator", "The Impossible Dream", and "The Rise And Fall Of Imelda Marcos" are among the books that gained a favourably wide readership.

Denmark is catching up. It is unusual to note the release of two books about the Philippines during the last 10 months:

Philip Bay: Filippinerne, den asiatiske bastard.
Photos by the author; Møllefolkelig
Samvirke and Hovedland, Skive, 1986.
157 pages.

Sarah B. Janskov: Mellem kup og kaos.
Photographs by Henrik Saxgren; AJOUR
Publishing, Danmarks Journalist Højskole, Århus, 1988, 127 pages.

Philip Bay (was our guest speaker og last year's independence day) is a Danish-American cook and free lance journalist who covered the snap elections that culminated in the four stunning days of February, 1986 when People Power catapulted Aquino's widow, Corazon, to presidency and ended up the 20 years of Marcos dictatorship. For Bay, the strings of events left an impression strong enough that he could write a book. He wrote in a rambling travelogue manner of the memorable events before and after the February 1986 Revolution.

The book is a sociology handbook of sorts on Philippine Society. The author went into the inner psyche of the Filipinos, his traits, his weaknesses and ethnic cultural concepts and values.

The title chosen for his book became a detriment to onionskinned Filipino readers. The word bastard is ahightly charged concept in a country that has been rules for centuries by the almighty Spanish friars who in fact literally left thousands of bastards or half-breed mestizos who now compose the Philippine elites. The book takes the word bastard to mean the hybrid nature of the whole Filipino culture that can be found among the majority of the Filipinos. On the other hand, the word does not apply the mountain tribes and the Muslims of Mindanao who remained untouched or uncolonized.

Sarah B. Janskov is actually the 12 initials of the 12 students from The Danish College of Journalism in Århus. They wrote the book as a graduation requirement equivalent to our thesis. They zssessed the fragile period when Aquino's political life in the first 20 months. With six months research prior to their two month stay in the country, they start from scratch and really dig into the material in the field. But through the gregarios-ness and openness of the Filipino society, the student journa-list accomplished many things in so short time. Like Bay, they also present the country in a travelogue manner, succeed in showcasing Filipino values and ethnic concepts peppered with photographs. But they do not clearly have the same ease and ac-cess who moved intimately amongst a true section of Philippine society.

W.A.I.F. - A Network For Pinays

A group of concerned Filipinas organizes a NETWORK for Filipinas in Denmark (and eventually in the whole Nordic Region) that primarily connects interested Filipinas through telephone chain. The group call their action as Waif, an acronym for Women's Advice/Aid/Action and Information For Filipinas.

The idea of the network for all Filipinas has always been a-bor-ning from the time Pinays in Copenhagen area realized that there are issues, problems and concerns that are specific to them in new country. But the idea really became pertinent in the wake of the controversy over the issue of arranged marriages through con-tact bureaus. "A few among us realized that publicity and perso-nalities aside, the fact remains that we are all affected if even just one Filipina is in some kind af trouble. We sympathize with her, maybe we would like to help her", admonished one of the or-ganizers of the network. She added: "Maybe we have been here in this country for a while but still we encounter situations where a sister Pinay would be the best to consult." They thought of or-ganizing a telephone net where Filipinas could contact each other - at no cost except a telephone call.

The "organization" cannot at the moment exist physically due to financial reasons. But it is accurate to say wherever Pinays are who want to assist each other with adjustment problems, and who are willing to lend a helping hand, offer a shoulder to cry on, etc.....

For Filipinas who seem new and feeling alone can call the follo-wing numbers and can freely talk about common issues or experi-ences:
